Occupy camp breaks apart, but how do the pieces fall?

► Police move in, putting an end to 39-day encampment ► Park cleanup begins

The Toronto Police spent yesterday dismantling the Occupy Toronto campground.

Protesters, for the most part, made a graceful exit and the cops played nice.

But now that St. James Park is tent-free, what's next for the movement?

Protesters: Like other evicted occupy groups before them, the protesters have to regroup and plan. Another legal battle is likely out of the question, said Kevin Konnyu, a 33-year-old volunteer facilitator. But some form of occupying is on the short-term agenda, he adds.

Homeless: For the approximately 100 homeless people who slept in the park, police advised them to go to the Adelaide Resource Centre for Women to receive support.

Local businesses: Rachel Young, co-founder of Camaraderie Coworking and organizer of Friends of St. James Park — a 40-person coalition of area business owners and residents who wanted the occupiers out — said she's looking forward to the "revitalization" of the park and the return of lunching "business folk" and dog-walkers.

Coffee shops: Staff at both Starbucks, at Church and Adelaide streets, and Second Cup, at King and Jarvis streets, predict sales will return to pre-occupancy levels.

"It's only because of occupying space and being slightly inconvenient that focus is put on massive injustices and inequalities."

KEVIN KONNYU, 33, A VOLUNTEER FACILITATOR FOR OCCUPY TORONTO

tion levels.

Church: The Cathedral Church of St. James declined to comment.

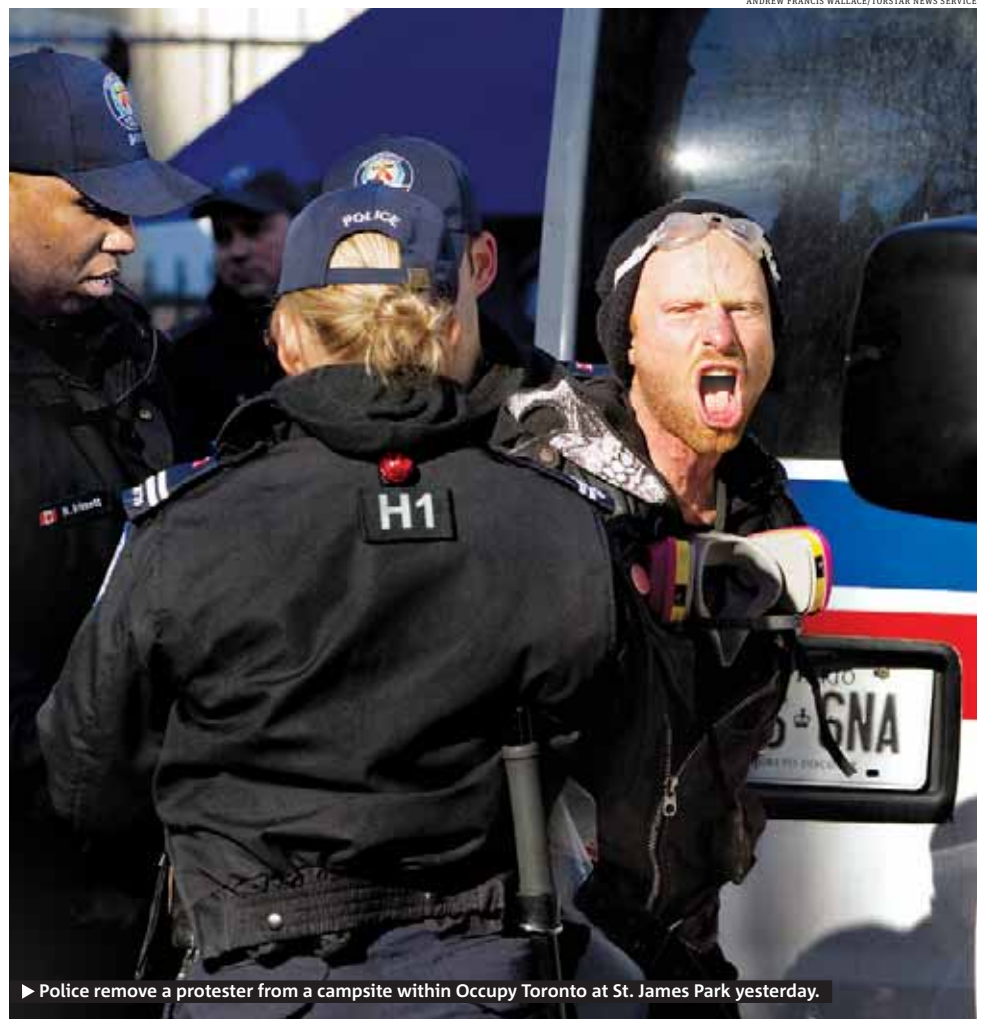

St. James Park: According to a City of Toronto press release, the full cost of cleanup and damage won't be known for a couple of days. Once the park is clean, Parks, Forestry and Recreation staff will begin the restoration work — including winterizing the sprinkler system.

Yurts: In October, the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU) helped purchase three yurts, worth about $20,000, made by Groovy Yurts inc., a Quebec-based company.

"They're going into storage," said Heino Nielsen, administrator of the campaigns and communications department at OPSEU.

Arena builder has 'no expectations' of NHL team

The chairman of the group hoping to build a 20,000-seat arena in Markham says that concerts alone are justification for the $300-million expense.

W. Graeme Roustan of GTA Sports and Entertainment confirmed plans for a multi-use entertainment venue yesterday, but shot down suggestions the true aim of the "GTA Centre" is to snag an NHL team.

"I have no expectations of having any professional sports franchise at the GTA Centre as a tenant," said Roustan, adding that concert promoters expect venues that large. The Air Canada Centre seats 19,800.

Roustan, chairman of hockey apparel manufacturer Bauer, tried to buy the Montreal Canadiens in 2009. NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly confirmed Tuesday that the GTA Centre group had approached the league, but had been told to assume nothing.

The GTA Centre would sit on land owned by Remington Group, which is developing a larger swath of downtown Markham. Roustan said his group hopes to put a proposal before council in early 2012.

Markham councillors are keeping mum on the venue, with some referring questions to the mayor, who was not available for comment yesterday.

TTC wants to hear from you

► Transit town hall meeting running 6-9 p.m. at city hall council chambers

The TTC is coming late to the customer-relations experience, acknowledges its new customer service chief, who's holding the transit system's first town hall meeting tonight.

"There's not many organizations in the world that would find it strange talking to their customers," Chris Upfold said of the event.

Such a meeting was among the 78 recommendations made by a blue-ribbon panel on TTC customer service last year. It would have come sooner, but the top priority — finding someone like Upfold — took time. The Canadian returned to Toronto after holding a similar job with the London Underground.

Despite pervasive complaints about the transit service and impending cuts to buses in the new year, Upfold said he expects "good, positive customer engagement" to come out of the event.

600 There is room for 400 people in the council chamber and overflow space for 200 more.

The first hour will be a marketplace, where riders can look at displays and talk to staff about TTC vehicles, service and plans. And then it will be an open microphone, he said.

The first hour will focus on service quantity, routes and schedules. The second will be on the customer service experience.

Upfold will be flanked by executives and staff from all corners of the TTC, the subway lines and Transit Control.

Officer awaits his sentence for grabbing testicles of motorist

A Toronto police officer found guilty of grabbing and squeezing the testicles of a motorist after a traffic stop two years ago will be sentenced Feb. 2.

Const. Salameh Marji was found guilty of one count of assault and one count of sexual assault.

He was to be sentenced Monday but Justice Lucia Favret agreed to the adjournment to allow time for further submissions.

The charges stemmed from a traffic stop and search of a 21-year-old driver on Sept. 2, 2009.

The driver testified that Marji, who earlier that year was named police officer of the month, punched him in the face and slammed his head on the police cruiser.

"The constable violated (the driver's) sexual integrity, given the body part he touched and the nature of the touch."

JUSTICE LUCIA FAVRET

In a search, which was considered unlawful by the judge, Marji also grabbed the driver twice by the testicles and squeezed so hard as to elicit screams of pain.

Space crunch could impel rapid transit

- Traffic at Union could nearly triple by 2031: Metrolinx
- Subway or light rail potential solutions

ANDREW WALLACE/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

► Bruce McCuaig, CEO of Metrolinx.

A looming space crunch at Union Station and on the south end of the Yonge subway in 20 years could move up the prospect of another downtown subway or light rail line.

One potential solution is to move up plans to create a downtown rapid-transit line (subway or light rail) from Exhibition Place to the Bloor-Danforth subway, which would relieve pressure on Union Station.

Transit officials say current renovations at the station, including a new train shed roof, a shopping concourse, new exit and entry paths and a larger GO concourse, should accommodate growing ridership in the medium-term.

But in two decades, GO expects to be running all-day, two-way service on all its lines, and there won't be enough room for people or trains at Union as the load of downtown-bound commuters doubles.

Meantime, the TTC will also be under pressure to accommodate more than double the number of people living downtown and a 25 per cent increase in the number of jobs in the core.

The relief line scenario could see riders on the Barrie and Georgetown train lines ending their GO trip at a stop east of Union Station, in the Bathurst North Yard near Spadina Avenue.

From there they could access the new rapid transit line or the PATH. The plan could shift 35 per cent of GO train users to that station.

Another option approved for further study is a Lakeshore GO tunnel to a new station east of Union near Yonge St., which would direct 40 per cent of GO riders to a second underground level.

The underground track scenario would depend on GO trains being electrified. Metrolinx is still looking at how much those options would relieve traffic on the Yonge subway line.

The study is a sign of the growing integration between TTC and the provincial agency Metrolinx, blurring the current distinction between urban and suburban services, said Metrolinx CEO Bruce McCuaig.

Dog owners walk again as protesters leave

It's an understatement to say that the locals who frequented the St. James Park pre-occupation are happy to see the protestors gone — the dog walkers especially.

After all, before the park was overrun with yurts, port-a-potties and ceremonial fires it was home to Woofstock, a festival celebrating all things Fido.

"This is not just a park," said Richard Paul, an agent for classical musicians, "this is where residents would socialize."

Paul and his grey, seven-year-old Skye Terrier, Gomez, used to meet some 30 other owners and their pets at 5 p.m. daily. They'd talk while the dogs played. However, that stopped when the protestors arrived.

Still, Paul's problem isn't with the protest per se but

"I used to admire the beautiful grass which is no more"

ERIC ANDREWS, A REAL ESTATE AGENT AND AREA RESIDENT

rather the righteous attitude of the occupiers.

"There was a sense of entitlement," said Paul, who is also a member of Friends of St. James Park, a coalition of about 40 locals in opposition to the occupation.

"It's the end of this particular little operation," said Andrew, a 33-year-old engineer who walks Kenya, his 120-lb black and tan Swiss Mountain dog, at least twice a day through the park. (Kenya, says Andrew, is the only one of her kind in the area, the rest are "miserable condo dogs" like Chihuahuas).

Andrew looks forward to

Kenya being able to run freely through the park chasing squirrels.

Many locals bemoaned the transformation of the park from a green space to muddy mess.

For others, the protest was a glimpse into a bohemian existence.

"It reminded me of Nuit Blanche," said Ben Frank, a member of the Canadian Armed Forces.

At least one man will miss the opportunity to talk politics.

"I spoke to them about the green party," said Will, a 60-year-old litigation lawyer who frequents the park weekly to sit on the benches of the English-style garden and eat his lunch.

"But others have spoken about anarchy," he said, "I don't buy that."

In conversation, residents living near St. James

Park wonder who will foot the restoration bill.

Ruth Pierce, a retired education consultant said the park used to be her oasis where she listened to singing birds.

But now, she says, it's a potential burden on her pocketbook.

"All the policemen you see today, all the city workers," said Pierce, "who is going to pay for that?"

Visa log-jam sparks legal battle

► Potential immigrants say Ottawa is moving too slowly ► People paid fees, but still waiting for decision

More than 300 people around the world awaiting immigration visas have filed legal notices against the Canadian government, claiming they are being "warehoused" in a lengthy backlog.

The notices, filed with the Federal Court of Canada, are asking Citizenship and Immigration Canada to process their applications within a reasonable time frame.

The litigants, some of whom applied as far back as 2004, accuse CIC of violating a pledge to assess and finalize decisions in a timely fashion.

"These people paid the application fees, but immigration has never even started processing their applications," said Tim Leahy, one of the lawyers representing the litigants.

The legal notices — from Asia to Africa, Europe and the Middle East

History repeats

► In 2002 and 2003, the federal government was confronted with a similar volley of court challenges to new regulations and the treatment of backlogged cases.

► Ottawa offered a $2.9 million settlement to 105,000 backlogged applicants, agreeing to get rid of the new rule that affected pre-existing applications negatively, said Leahy, who led one of the lawsuits.

— are growing in numbers with the recent launch of an online appeal for litigants at unfair-cic.com. It is not a class-action lawsuit, so a court ruling would apply only to those involved in the litigation.

Litigants include those who filed before February

► Shrish Aithala in Dubai, where he is currently working. The computer engineer filed his application for an immigration visa in 2006, but is still waiting for a decision to be made.

2008, when new laws were brought in to fast-track new applications from skilled workers, and those who filed between 2008 and 2010, when further restrictions capped the number of skilled-worker applications.

Ottawa has argued restrictions are needed to reduce a backlog of 900,000 applications.

But some litigants claim the government has effectively ceased assessing applications filed before 2008.

Shrish Aithala, who has a master's degree in computer integrated engineering from New York's Rochester Institute of Technology, filed his application in 2006 in New Delhi.

"I cannot understand how the existing backlog can be bypassed. I'm sure there are skilled and educated people in the backlog ready to contribute to the economy," Aithala, 36, told the Toronto Star from his current job in Dubai.

"Because of the uncertainty of my application status, I have missed out on many opportunities as commitment was required from my side with regards to these work assignments."

Applicants who filed between 2008 and 2010 say they, too, are being unfairly treated since the application cap was brought in.

The immigration department confirmed receipt of the legal notices, but declined to comment on the allegations.

Feds urged to lead child exploitation fight

The federal government needs to take the lead in fighting child exploitation in Canada starting with a national databank on the problem, a Senate committee said Thursday.

"Canadian children who are being sexually exploited, or are at risk of being sexually exploited, do not all have sufficient access to the services that could help them," the committee wrote in a report prepared after two years of study.

"Those currently working to help these children could benefit from co-ordinated efforts and shared expertise. The Government of Canada could show leadership in this area by facilitating the sharing of experiences and best practices amongst various stakeholders."

Members of the Senate human rights committee unanimously renewed an unheeded call from 2007 to name a parliamentary Children's Commissioner to represent the interests of the country's youngest and most vulnerable citizens.

That commissioner would ensure the government was taking effective steps to follow and address such issues as child abuse, child prostitution and child pornography, and make sure Canada was fulfilling its duties under the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Liberal MP Marc Garneau has prepared a private member's bill calling for a Children's Commissioner, but it has yet to come before the Commons for debate.

The senators also emphasized the gravity of the problem of sexual exploitation in First Nations and Inuit communities.

CBC must hand over papers

The CBC has lost another key court battle in its efforts to keep internal documents secret.

The Federal Court of Appeal unanimously ruled against the public broadcaster yesterday, saying the CBC is legally required to turn over material for review by the information commissioner of Canada.

The case involved 16 requests for information the CBC said it did not have to provide. It cited a provision in the law that allows it to protect journalistic, creative and programming material.

The broadcaster also refused to allow information commissioner Suzanne Legault to examine the documents to review its decision.

Legault took the case to Federal Court, winning in 2010 and again yesterday after the CBC appealed.

Chinese firm could face trial for oilsands deaths

A unit of a giant Chinese petrochemical corporation can face trial on safety charges in the deaths of two oilsands workers.

The Alberta Court of Appeal has upheld a ruling that Sinopec Shanghai Engineering Co. can be prosecuted under the Health and Safety Act.

The court also ruled that the Crown can apply to hold a trial on the charges under the Criminal Code if Sinopec Shanghai does not show up in court.

French only in the schoolyard?

► Montreal survey says 70 per cent of respondents support the speak French in all school spaces effort

The Quebec government is reacting favourably to a plan by a Montreal school board to ban any other language than French from its schoolyards.

Culture Minister Christine St-Pierre says the French-language Commission scolaire de Montreal would be making an important effort to promote Quebec's majority language.

"I think that children who attend school in French must obviously speak French among themselves," she said yesterday. "To say that it must be French in the schoolyard sends a clear message and that message is, 'Listen, you must learn French.'"

However, commission

► Quebec Culture Minister Christine St-Pierre

chairwoman Diane de Courcy says there would be no sanctions against anyone speaking English, Arabic or Spanish, for example.

"Education works by persuasion and repetition. We don't work by punishment," she said.

Under Quebec's Frenchlanguage charter, most immigrants and francophones must send their children to French school. However, students generally speak whatever language they want out in the schoolyard.

De Courcy says the commission wants to improve students' French. She also points out that many students come from different cultural communities and have French as their third language after their mother tongue and English.

St-Pierre backs this. "There are 76,000 students from cultural communities in Montreal. ... So it's important to send the message that elementary and secondary school happens in French." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Polar popularity pulling on purse strings

Call them Canada's billion dollar bears.

While it's no secret that polar bears have captured Canadians' hearts, they've apparently got us by the purse strings, too.

Canadians would be willing to pay $6.3 billion per year to ensure the polar bears do not disappear, according to an Environment Canada report.

With 15,000 of these majestic creatures roaming the Canadian Arctic, that's about $420,000 per bear — slightly less than the average price of a house in Toronto. The multi-billion dollar value comes from a variety of the bears' charming, albeit hard to quantify, qualities, the report says.

The polar bear's image is constantly used in advertising campaigns, the report points out. (Think of Coca Cola's obsession with the great, white bear around Christmas and its $2 million contribution to the World Wildlife Fund.)

The iconic image of ursus maritimus has even been hijacked by the government for the $2 coin.

Plus, polar bears are an invaluable asset to science and education, the report states. Their fur has fibre-optic properties that capture heat, and their status at the top of the food chain provides much information on habitat productivity. "It is, moreover, a charismatic animal whose image has come to symbolize climate change," the report explains. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICES

Bear value

- The report, which cost $41,300, was used to help decide whether polar bears should be named "species of special concern."
- Polar bears' popularity supercedes more at risk whales with Canadians willing to spend $508 per household to save the bears, versus $107 per year to save the whales.
- Polar bears bring $1.9 million into economy through sport and subsistence hunting and $7.2 million through tourism.

'Unprecedented' Arctic sea ice loss

► Research says Arctic sea ice has declined more in last half-century than over last 1,450 years

BRENNAN LINSLEY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Research published in a top scientific journal, which gives the most detailed picture ever of the northern oceans over the previous millennium-and-a-half, concludes the current decline in sea ice has already lasted longer than any previous one in that period.

"When we look at our reconstruction, we can see that the decline that has occurred in the last 50 years or so seems to be unprecedented for the last 1,450 years," Christian Zdanowicz of the Geological Survey of Canada said yesterday.

Melting Arctic sea ice is considered a main indicator of climate change.

"It's difficult not to come up with the conclusion that greenhouse gases must have something to do with this," added Zdanowicz, one of the co-authors of the report in Nature.

Zdanowicz and his team combined 69 different data sources to determine the extent of sea ice for every decade going back about 1,000 years and every 25 years beyond that.

They found that by the mid-1990s sea ice had fallen even further than in previous lows such as the so-called Medieval Warm Period between 800 and 1300. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Website calls for town boycott over bunny cull

A website is urging tourists to boycott a scenic Rocky Mountain community near Banff National Park if it doesn't back off plans to destroy its feral rabbits.

The site called Canmore Resident Plan doesn't list a spokesperson, but heavily criticizes the town's mayor and council. It calls on musicians, dancers, sports teams and businesses planning events in Canmore to go elsewhere from Dec. 1.

"You have to take some of it seriously because obviously you will lose some people. There's no doubt about it," Mayor Ron Casey said in an interview with The Canadian Press. "But at the same time you can't let a percentage drop in tourism influence you from doing the right thing."

BILL GRAVELAND/THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Kyndra Bigg of the group Save Canmore Bunnies makes friends with a resident of a Canmore park, yesterday.

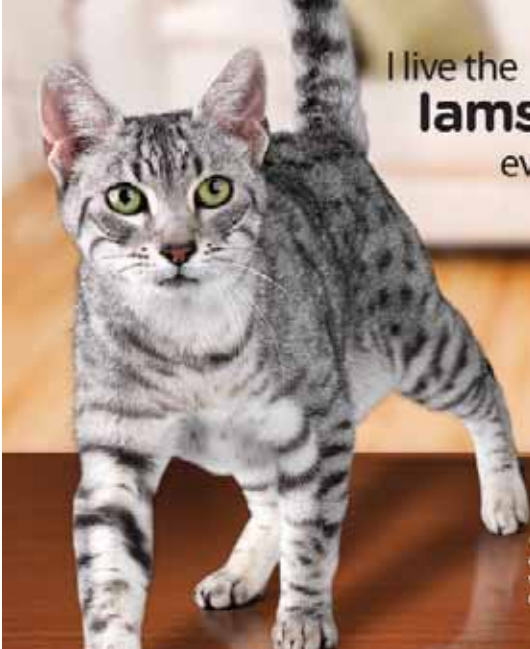

Canmore is expected to begin trapping some of its burgeoning bunny population next week. The issue has been the source of heated debate for years.

The rabbits were originally pets but were released in the 1990s and started doing what bunnies do best. According to town officials, the population has hit the 2,000 mark — one rabbit for every six people in the town of 12,000 — and something has to be done.

Canmore hired a contractor to trap the rabbits and have them gassed if a deal isn't reached with a local animal welfare group to sterilize and relocate them.

Casey said the rabbits could attract cougars and coyotes looking for an easy snack. THE CANADIAN PRESS

U.S. stands firm after Russia threat

► Medvedev warns that Moscow may opt out of START arms control deal with Washington

The White House says the U.S. will not limit or change its missile defence plans in Europe amid new threats from Russia.

Spokesman Tommy Vitor says the U.S. has been open and transparent with Moscow on its missile defence plans in Western Europe. The U.S. has repeatedly said those plans reflect a growing threat from Iran and would not be directed against Russia's nuclear forces.

His comments follow Russian President Dmitry Medvedev's assertion yesterday that Russia would target the U.S. missile shield if Washington fails to assuage Moscow's concerns.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tit-for-tat

► The U.S. plan calls for placing land- and sea-based radars and interceptors in European locations, including Romania and Poland, over the next decade and upgrading them over time.

► Medvedev warned that Moscow would deploy short-range Iskander missiles in Kaliningrad, a Baltic Sea region bordering Poland, and place weapons in other areas in Russia's west and south to target U.S. missile defence sites. Medvedev said Russia would put a new early-warning radar in Kaliningrad.

Rains batter eastern Sicily

Torrential rain battered eastern Sicily yesterday and mudslides killed at least three people and have swept away cars and washed out bridges. A mudslide in the hamlet of Saponara killed a 10-year-old boy as his family fled their home. Much of Italy's terrain is landslide-prone, and many have built homes on steep hillsides in defiance of warnings by geologists.

Clooney, Ronaldo on Berlusconi defence list

Actor George Clooney and his ex-girlfriend, Elisabetta Canalis, are among more than 200 witnesses accepted yesterday by a Milan court in the trial of former prime minister Silvio Berlusconi for allegedly paying for sex with an underage prostitute.

Clooney has said he was approached by Berlusconi's team to testify about "bunga bunga" parties at Berlusconi's villas, but says he only visited the premier's residence once to seek aid for Darfur and declined an invitation to stay.

Berlusconi's defence lawyer Niccolò Ghedini told reporters that Clooney and soccer star Cristiano Ronaldo are on the defence list because an important prosecution witness cited them, the news agency LaPresse reported.

Yemen's president agrees to go

Countrywide protests pushed for Ali Abdullah Saleh's ouster

Yemen's autocratic leader agreed yesterday to step down after months of demonstrations against his 33-year rule, pleasing the U.S. and its Gulf allies who feared that collapsing security in the impoverished nation was allowing an active al-Qaida franchise to step up operations.

President Ali Abdullah Saleh is the fourth leader to lose power in the wave of Arab Spring uprisings this year, following longtime dictators in Tunisia, Egypt and Libya.

But the deal ushering Saleh from power grants him immunity from prosecution and doesn't explicitly ban him from the country's political life — raising doubts that it will address Yemen's many problems.

The deal opens the way to what will likely be a messy power struggle.

Strategic value

► Oil fields. Yemen, a nation of some 25 million people, is of strategic value to the United States and its Gulf Arab allies, particularly Saudi Arabia. It sits close to the major Gulf oil fields and overlooks key shipping lanes in the Red and Arabian seas.

► Fractured. Even before the uprising began, Yemen was the poorest country in the Middle East, fractured and unstable with a government that had weak authority at best outside the capital Sanaa.

Among those possibly vying for power are Saleh's son and nephew, powerful tribal leaders, and the commander of a renegade battalion.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rival Palestinian leaders to meet in Cairo

The meeting of President Mahmoud Abbas and Hamas chief Khaled Mashaal, the rival Palestinian leaders, will signal whether they're truly ready to share power or largely going through the motions for political gains.

Talks today in Cairo will be their first serious sitdown since the Palestinians' corrosive split of 2007, when the Islamic militant Hamas seized the Gaza Strip from Abbas, leaving him with only the West Bank. Repeated attempts at reconciliation have failed, and a power-sharing deal the leaders signed in principle in May has stalled, mainly over who would head an interim unity government.

► Hamas leader Khaled Mashaal

Hamas adamantly opposes Abbas' long-standing choice, West Bank-based Prime Minister Salam Fayyad, and the only way forward today would be to resolve this dispute.

Even if Abbas were to sacrifice the internationally backed Fayyad — as some aides say he is willing to do — it's far from certain the two sides are ready to go through with the other elements of the unity deal. As part of the agreement, legislative and presidential elections would be held in the West Bank and Gaza within a year of the formation of an interim government, and the rivals' security forces would be merged.

Bahrain report cites use of torture

► At least 35 people have been killed in uprising-related violence

With Bahrain's king watching, the chief investigator asked to probe his government's crackdowns gave a blow-by-blow reckoning yesterday of torture, excessive force and fast-track justice in attempts to crush the largest Arab Spring uprising in the Gulf.

The investigator, Mahmoud Cherif Bassiouni, also said there was no evidence of Iranian links to Bahrain's Shiite-led protests. That was a clear rebuke to Gulf leaders, who accuse Tehran of playing a role in the 10-month-old showdown in the Western-allied kingdom.

The 500-page study — authorized by Bahrain's Sunni rulers in a bid to ease tensions — marks the most comprehensive document on security force actions during any of the revolts

Discrimination

► Bahrain's Shiites comprise about 70 per cent of the island nation's 525,000 citizens. They have complained of widespread discrimination such as being blocked from top government or military posts.

across the Arab world this year. It also displayed a stunning image of a powerful Arab monarch facing a harsh public reckoning, as King Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa listened somberly to a bullet-point summary of the report's conclusions.

Bassiouni's summary read like a checklist of complaints by rights groups since February, including jail-house abuses using electric shocks and beatings.

► Former Penn State football defensive co-ordinator Gerald 'Jerry' Sandusky.

A former U.S. Penn State assistant football coach accused of molesting boys for more than 15 years faces two new claims of child sexual abuse, but both are unfounded, his lawyer told The Associated Press yesterday.

Attorney Joseph Amendola said one claim against Jerry Sandusky stemmed from a Sandusky family dispute, and he characterized the other as an example of people trying to mimic other allegations.

"That doesn't surprise me because we believe there would be a number of copycat allegations, people who (who) really maybe not even (have) had direct contact with Jerry but ... try to jump on the bandwagon," Amendola said.

He said the accusations, should they result in charges, would be vigorously contested.

"We'll defend those if and when they become charges," Amendola told the AP in a phone interview yesterday.

"We'll defend those just like we're defending the other charges."

Sandusky, 67, is charged with sexually abusing eight boys, some on campus. He has said he showered with some boys but never sexually abused them.

Disease sleuth debunks health myths

► Jennifer Gardy braves hungry mosquitoes, a tub of ice water and more to separate fact from fiction

Fact or fiction: Mosquitoes prefer women. You lose most of your body warmth through your head. Drink alcohol to keep warm. Disease detective Dr. Jennifer Gardy tests these common health beliefs and others in the documentary Myth or Science, airing tonight on CBC. We asked her about the wonders of grilling with rosemary, wearing a hat and doing vodka shots in a freezer.

You tested grilled hamburgers to see if eating grilled meat promotes cancer. Does it?

It's eating improperly cooked meat — really, any protein — that's cooked on too hot a flame so that it creates a char on the meat, the chunks of carbon. There's a chemical reaction with the protein that forms byproducts — heterocyclic amines. These HCAs are compounds that can bind to your DNA and cause mutations. If it happens at the wrong gene at the wrong time it can turn into cancer.

In your test, the burger with chopped rosemary had 84 per cent fewer HCAs than a plain burger and the one marinated in the Caribbean blend had 88 per cent fewer. Rosemary protects against that damage from grilling?

Anything high in antioxidants — rosemary, other herbs, fruits such as blueberries — helps prevent the formation of HCAs. Antioxidants are little molecular mops that soak up free radicals, one of the things that leads to HCA formation.

Common belief: We lose most of our body heat through our heads. Fact or fiction?

I'll call it "faction." It turns out your body loses heat equally all over its surfaces. The reason the myth persists, and is true to a certain extent, is that our heads tend to be the only exposed part of our body.

To test that, you bravely submerged your bikini-clad body in icy water. How cold was it?

It was 14 degrees Celsius. When that's the outdoor temperature, it's OK, but water is a different beast. Water draws the heat away from your body faster.

Will alcohol keep you

► Disease detective Jennifer Gardy stars in the documentary Myth or Science, airing tonight on CBC.

warm?

It's a deadly illusion. For that experiment, I swallowed a radioactive pill that acts as a thermometer that broadcasted my core temperature via radio waves to a transmitter in the lab. Then they popped me into a freezer where I sat doing vodka shots and reporting how I felt. When I was sober, it was freaking cold in there, but the more I drank I was totally OK hanging out in the freezer. Meanwhile my core temperature was dropping.

The alcohol gives the impression you are warmer because it acts as a vasodilator, making your skin heat up, and makes you feel warm. But it's drawing out your core temperature to do that. You feel warm but you are closer to hypothermia. Also, the alcohol acts as a muscle relaxant and you don't shiver. That shivering is the body's way to bring up the core temperature. So not only does your core temperature drop but you also turn off the body's rescue mechanism.

Which test result surprised you the most?

I always believed I was a mosquito magnet. But I went head to head with Dr. Uli Bernier (chemist at the U.S. Mosquito and Fly Research Unit in Florida) and they picked him.

We both put our arms into an olfactometer. When the tank door was released, hundreds of mosquitoes flew down the tube of the scent they preferred. We did it a couple of times. I'd get four or five and he'd get hundreds.

It boils down to individual secretions. The human skin releases on average 300 types of compounds and everyone is different. So we all have individual scent and some are more preferable to mosquitoes than others.

Occupy protests cost cities $13M

► Spending comes as police across the U.S. have cut overtime budgets, travel and training due to recession

Cities across the United States have spent at least $13 million US in response to the Occupy Wall Street movement on police overtime and other services, according to a survey by The Associated Press.

Authorities say the police spending is for the public's safety, while protesters say cities could save money by simply letting the demonstrations against economic inequality and corporate greed continue.

Cities that have seen the most clashes between Occupy protesters and police, including the movement's original site in New York City, have spent the most on police work.

The AP gathered figures from government agencies in 18 cities with active protests and focused on costs through Nov. 15, the day protesters were evicted from New York's Zuccotti Park, where the protests began Sept. 17 before spreading nationwide.

Broken down city by city, the numbers are more or less in line with the cost of policing major public events and emergencies. In Los Angeles, for example,

New York City

In New York City, the police department has spent $7 million in overtime on the protests.

- $7 million is small change given the NYPD's $4.5-billion budget, which allots money for emergency overtime.
- Last year, the New York Police Department spent about $550 million on overtime.

the Michael Jackson memorial concert cost the city $1.4 million.

In some cities, officials say the spending is eating into their overtime budgets and leaving less money for other public services.

Protesters blame excessive police presence for the high costs in some places.

The city of Los Angeles estimates that property damage to a park, including destroyed sprinklers, has been $200,000. About 500 Occupy Los Angeles protesters' tents are jammed into the park surrounding City Hall.

► University of California, Davis' Lt. John Pike uses pepper spray to move Occupy UC Davis protesters while blocking their exit from the school's quad last Friday in Davis, Calif. An Associated Press survey says cities across the U.S. have spent at least $13 million US in response to the Occupy Wall Street movement.

In Oakland, Calif., where protesters have clashed more than once with police and temporarily forced the shutdown of a major port, the city has spent more than $2.4 million responding to the protests. The cash-strapped city already faced a $58 million budget gap this year.

"We're here fighting corporate greed and they're worried about a lawn?"

CLARK DAVIS
OCCUPY LOS ANGELES

Other cities were not too concerned about mounting costs, with officials saying they budget for events like these.

Atlanta spent nearly $652,000 on the Occupy Atlanta protests, paying for everything from overtime for police officers and firefighters to running its mobile command centre. The city has $56 million in its reserve fund.

Costs were far lower in Boston than City Council President Stephen Murphy initially predicted last month, when he said police costs for providing security at Occupy Boston for October would be as high as $2 million. The city of Boston has spent $575,000 in overtime through mid-November.

Polygamy law upheld

► B.C. judge justifies centuries-old ban on polygamy

► Says harm to women and children outweigh religious rights

Chief Justice Robert Bauman of the B.C. Supreme Court concluded yesterday that Canada's polygamy law is valid as long as it isn't used to prosecute child brides, and he suggested it should be interpreted that way.

"This case is essentially about harm.... This includes harm to women, to children, to society and to the institution of monogamous marriage," wrote Bauman.

"Polygamy's harm to society includes the critical fact that a great many of its individual harms are not specific to any particular religious, cultural or regional context. They can be generalized and expected to occur wherever polygamy exists."

Bauman's decision isn't binding, although the case is expected to end up at the Supreme Court of Canada, which would have the final say on Canada's polygamy law. George Macintosh, a lawyer appointed to oppose the law at the hearings, said he would likely launch such an appeal.

The case was prompted by more than two decades of controversy surrounding the isolated religious community of Bountiful, B.C., where residents follow a fundamentalist form of Mormonism that believes polygamy is required to attain the highest level of heaven.

The failed prosecution of two leaders from the community — Winston Blackmore and James Oler set the stage for the current constitutional reference.

"I certainly don't plan on dropping my faith and running away," said Blackmore upon hearing the decision. THE CANADIAN PRESS

7 charged in Amish attacks

MIKE SCHENCK/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The leader of a breakaway Amish group allowed the beatings of those who disobeyed him, made some members sleep in a chicken coop and had sexual relations with married women to "cleanse them," federal authorities said yesterday as they charged him and six others with hate crimes in hair-cutting attacks against other Amish.

Authorities raided the group's compound in eastern Ohio earlier in the day and arrested seven men, including group leader Sam Mullet and three of his sons. Several members of the group carried out the attacks in September, October and November by forcefully cutting the beards and hair of Amish men and women and then taking photos of them, authorities said.

Cutting the hair is a highly offensive act to the Amish, who believe the Bible instructs women to let their hair grow long and men to grow beards and stop shaving once they marry.

One victim told the FBI he would rather have

Mullet's defense

Mullet's defence attorney said that his client plans to fight the federal charges.

- Mullet said he didn't order the hair-cutting but didn't stop the crime either.
- His goal was to send a message to other Amish that they should be ashamed of themselves for how they were treating Mullet and his community.

been "beaten black and blue than to suffer the disfigurement and humiliation of having his hair removed," according to court papers.

The attacks struck at the core of the Amish identity and tested their principles.

They are pacifists and strongly believe that they must be forgiving in order for God to forgive them, which often means handing out their own punishment and not reporting crimes to law enforcement.

New contact with Mars probe

► $170 million craft stranded in earth's orbit since Nov. 9 launch ► Contact gives hope that engineers can prevent its uncontrollable plunge to Earth

The European Space Agency (ESA) has received the first signal from an unmanned spacecraft bound for a moon of Mars since it got stuck in Earth's orbit.

The ESA, which has been helping Russia to try to communicate with the errant probe, said in a statement yesterday that its tracking facility in the Australian city of Perth established contact with the spacecraft late Tuesday.

Elephants die in heat wave

ZIMBABWE. More than 77 elephants have died in a three-month heat wave that has dried up watering holes in western Zimbabwe, wildlife authorities said yesterday. Rangers in the Hwange National Park have counted 18 calves and 21 adolescent elephants among the dead animals, the state Parks and Wildlife Authority said in statement. Since September, Hwange National Park has seen temperatures soar to above 40 C, far higher than annual averages.

Man gets 20 years
for 'offensive' texts

► Thai court deemed messages not fit for the queen

A Thai criminal court sentenced a 61-year-old man to 20 years in prison yesterday for sending text messages deemed offensive to the country's queen.

The court found Amphon Tangnoppaku guilty on four counts under lèse-majesté and computer crime laws, sentencing him to five years imprisonment for each charge, to be served consecutively.

Lèse-majesté is the crime

36 Statistics
obtained by The Associated Press from the Office of the Attorney General show 36 lèse-majesté cases were sent for prosecution in 2010, compared to 18 in 2005 and just one in 2000.

details of an alleged offence is illegal.

The court said Amphon sent offensive text messages in May 2010 to a personal secretary of then-Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva. Amphon denied the charges, saying he was unfamiliar with the text-message function on mobile phones and did not know the recipient of the message.

VIRGIN MARY'S CINCTURE

Faithful flock to see relic

Despite the freezing cold, tens of thousands of Russians are standing in line to see a newly arrived relic of the Virgin Mary in Russia's largest Orthodox cathedral.

Virgin Mary's Cincture, a belt that Christians believe was worn by Jesus' mother, was brought to Russia by the St. Andrew's Foundation from Mount Athos, a monastic community in Greece, last month.

A line of worshippers waiting to enter the golden-domed Christ the Savior cathedral stretched yesterday for about four kilometres despite the temperatures dropping to -5 C.

The foundation said it takes about 24 hours to get to the relic as the line swelled to some 25,000 people yesterday.

Party's influence a wildcard

Estimates of how much of parliament the Brotherhood could win have varied, a reflection of how unpredictable Egypt has become since Mubarak's fall. Observers and Brotherhood members have predicted anywhere from 20 per cent to 50 per cent.

Under Mubarak, the Brotherhood ran in elections, scoring its biggest victory in 2005 when it took 20 per cent of the seats.

"The situation is very fluid right now and the undecided voters are much more right now," Khalil Annani, expert in political Islamic groups said.

Other Islamic groups are also running, particularly the ultraconservative Salafis, who follow an ideology close to puritanical Saudi Arabia, and parties more moderate than the Brotherhood.

► Ambulances make their way through thousands of Egyptian protesters in Tahrir Square in Cairo yesterday. The chaos created by this week's rallies could benefit the country's most powerful political party — the Muslim Brotherhood.

Protests setback for Brotherhood?

► Powerful political party still expected to dominate next week's parliamentary elections in Egypt

For months, Egypt's Muslim Brotherhood has focused single-mindedly on this moment — parliamentary elections beginning Monday that the fundamentalist group is expected to dominate. Now it may be a pyrrhic victory.

The Brotherhood stayed on the sidelines of this week's protests by secular liberal groups demanding the country's military rulers step down, hurting its image among key sectors of the Egyptian public who accuse the group of siding with the generals and selling out democracy demands to gain power.

By staying out of the protests, "the Brotherhood has made it clear that they want elections because they want the seat of power, no matter what that seat looks like," said Abdel-Jalil el-Sharnoubi, who once headed the Brotherhood's website until he quit the group earlier this year in frustration with its leadership.

Ever since the Feb. 11 fall of autocratic leader Hosni Mubarak, fears have been growing among some Egyptians that the country would take a strong turn toward Islamic fundamentalism.

The Brotherhood was long repressed under Mubarak, but it built up Egypt's largest and most disciplined political organization, with tens of thousands of members around the country.

They have been campaigning for months, while liberal, leftist and secular parties that arose since Mubarak's fall have been disorganized and divided.

And recent violence in Cairo's Tahrir Square and in cities around the country could benefit the Brotherhood even more. If turmoil reduces turnout at the polls, the party's results could be inflated because its supporters are the most organized and will cast ballots in large numbers no matter what.

Anti-nuke anger flies off the rails

► Vehicles torched as protesters in France try to stop 'radioactive train'

The shadow of Japan's nuclear disaster loomed over violence in northern France yesterday.

Riot police fired tear gas at anti-nuclear protesters in a Normandy field and vehicles were set aflame.

Activists damaged a railway and delayed the departure of a train carrying recycled uranium to Germany.

"Stop This Radioactive Train," read banners waved by protesters.

The train finally left the depot at Valognes, but was expected to meet protests and resistance all along its journey from a nuclear waste processing site on the English Channel to a storage site in northern Germany.

'Benton' sweeps Internet

"Benton! Benton! Jesus Christ!"

That was the cry heard around the world this week, when a video of a British man cursing his dog — as the dog chases some deer — went viral. (Search for Jesus Christ in Richmond Park.)

Within hours, a spoof video had gone up: "Jesus Christ in Jurassic Park," which places the "Benton!" audio track over footage of rampaging dinosaurs.

Then more parodies hit: Braveheart, Back to the Future, Jumanji, The Lion King, Alien.

How does someone make a viral video of a viral video so quickly? We contacted the "Jurassic" creator.

Bow had watched "Jurassic Park" three nights before and thought the scenes would match. The execution was done quickly: "I played three games of FIFA first so about 40 minutes."

Once posted, his parody landed on the front page of influential website Reddit, where it was rated highly.

Bow says the video became popular because, "If I'm being honest? Talent. I'm not being arrogant here but I think people recognize talent."

Court to probe Gadhafi crimes

► Prosecutor visits site of mass murder near Tripoli where survivors say 106 prisoners were killed in a grenade attack by Gadhafi loyalists

The chief prosecutor for the International Criminal Court viewed human bones and charred clothing at the site of a massacre that survivors say was committed by Gadhafi loyalists as the capital, Tripoli, fell to advancing rebels.

Luis Moreno-Ocampo pledged yesterday to help bring clarity to crimes stemming from the civil war.

Earlier, he announced that the court, based in The Hague, Netherlands, will not challenge Libya's right to try Moammar Gadhafi's son, Seif al-Islam, in his own country.

Moreno-Ocampo made the visit to the gruesome site, where a putrid stench rises from the ground, to determine whether to have the Netherlands-based court investigate it as part of its broader inquiry into crimes committed by the Gadhafi regime during the war.

The bones and charred clothing cover the ground of a shed-like building on a site where Gadhafi's now-deposed military had a base on the southwest outskirts of Tripoli.

The Libyan Society of the Missing says 106 prisoners were killed in the building on Aug. 23 when Gadhafi loyalists threw grenades inside.

The ICC has charged Seif al-Islam and former Libyan intelligence chief Abdullah al-Senoussi with crimes against humanity for unleashing the brutal crackdown on an uprising that began in February and spiraled into a civil war.

Wedding season reaching its peak

India's wedding season peaks from late October to early December each year as couples choose to marry in what are believed to be auspicious months. A typical Indian wedding traditionally starts with a procession with the groom riding or drawn by a carriage with a white horse, escorted by close family and friends, a brass band and a crew to provide mobile lighting along the route. Invited guests dance and celebrate through the streets, showering the groom with rupee notes, until they arrive at the wedding ceremony location.

Ethan Hawke knocks offshore oil drilling

Public inquiry scope too narrow to benefit St. Lawrence Gulf: Scientist

A Hollywood heavyweight who routinely seeks refuge from the limelight on Canada's East Coast is calling on the country's energy industry to abandon its plans to drill for oil in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The pristine wilderness of Nova Scotia captured Ethan Hawke's attention 12 years ago when he was visiting a friend, so moving him that he decided to buy a part-time retreat for himself and his family.

That wilderness, Hawke said, is now under threat from plans to begin offshore oil drilling in the gulf, an expanse of some temporary economic gain or long-term environmental loss, which one do you prefer,' we invariably choose the money," Hawke told The Canadian Press in an interview from New York City.

Plans for a well

"It's totally understandable, but I feel like we're reaching, as a community, some kind of crisis point."

Hawke, who rose to stardom in 1994 during his turn as an aimless musician in Reality Bites and earned an Academy Award nomination for his performance in 2001's Training Day, says last year's oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico offers a terrifying glimpse of what could happen if offshore exploration is allowed to move forward.

Quite apart from marvelling at the scenic landscape, Hawke said the provinces bounding the gulf would suffer untold economic and cultural hardships if oil contamination damaged the fisheries that sustain employment in the area. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Occupiers target shoppers

► Want people to rethink shopping at national chains and direct their attention to mom-and-pop stores

Occupy protesters want shoppers to occupy something besides door-buster sales and crowded mall parking lots on Black Friday.

Some don't want people to shop at all. Others just want to divert shoppers from big chains and giant shopping malls to local mom-and-pops.

And while the actions don't appear co-ordinated, they have similar themes: Supporting small businesses while criticizing the day's dedication to conspicuous consumption and the shopping frenzy that fuels big corporations.

Nearly each one promises some kind of surprise action on the day after Thanksgiving, the traditional start of the holiday shopping season.

"I don't picture a frustrated consumer that can't get into a box store turning around and going to a small business. I see that person going home."

JEAN CARD, SPOKESWOMAN

"If you ask, a lot of small business owners identify as business owners, not specifically small business," said Jean Card, spokeswoman for the National Federation of Independent Business.

specialization and other benefits that big, multi-state corporations can bring, said George Mason University economist Russ Roberts.

Besides, small businesses aren't necessarily better employers in terms of wages, benefits, opportunities for advancement and other measures, said John Quinterio, principal at the public policy research firm South by North Strategies in Chapel Hill, N.C.

He calculates that small mom-and-pops, which he defines as businesses with fewer than 10 employees, account for nearly 80 per cent of employer firms in the U.S., but only about 11 per cent of the jobs.

Super-low rates won't change soon: Carney

► But BoC governor gave no indication whether he may actually reduce rate, as two economists urged

Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney signalled strongly yesterday that he intends to keep interest rates at super-low levels for an extended period — perhaps into 2013 — despite a recent spate of good economic news.

In a speech to a business audience in Montreal, the central banker made clear that he sees recent indicators that the Canadian economy rebounded strongly in the third quarter, and continued to perform well in October, as a temporary respite from the approaching storm.

Carney is taking a cautious view of efforts in Europe to deal with the continent's sovereign debt and banking crisis, calling the situation a "crisis ... barely contained."

He acknowledged that as recently as July markets were expecting him to start raising the bank's trendsetting policy rate, which has been at one per cent since September 2011, given that the outlook appeared to be brightening and inflation was at or above the bank's comfort zone of between one and three per cent.

Canada has since been hit by a blast of headwinds from abroad, he said, and the future doesn't look nearly as bright.

The forecast now is for Canada's economy to muddle along with excess capacity well into 2013. He did not change his projection that the economy will grow by a modest 1.9 per cent next year, although he highlighted that risks remain high.

"In this environment, the bank judges it appropriate to maintain the considerable monetary policy stimulus in place," he said.

'15 SECONDS TO CURTAIN' LOVE AFFAIR

HE SAYS ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE
METRO

It's time to get things started, so let's discuss: Why does my generation find the Muppets' return so celebrational?

My workplace has been so overrun with Muppet talk lately that one boss said he wouldn't take part in any more conversations unless they were Muppet-free. Embracing our good fortune, my co-workers and I spent days defending our favourite Muppets with a vigour most people save for discussing which is the one true religion.

Let's be honest. The which-Muppet-is-best argument is silly, especially when one considers that Rowlf is the Ultimate Muppet, or "UltiMuppet," end of story.

That truth aside, the conversation still left me wondering what it is about the Muppets that captures everyone's imagination.

Have you ever had a girlfriend or boyfriend where all the things that bugged you in other partners seemed cute in her or him? That's the Muppets.

The show is soaked in irony, but is sincere and sweet. The franchise rakes in cash, but it feels like they're doing it for free. The jokes are cornier than anything this side of Hee Haw, but it's still hilarious.

Bring a Muppet to almost anything and it improves it. If there's a Twilight: New Muppet, I'm lining up at midnight to rave about how sexy Count Von Count is. If Mel Gibson wants to make The Passion of The Kermit, I'm there. I'll even watch An Inconvenient Muppet

"Bring a Muppet to almost anything and it improves it."

Truth if Beaker is trembling at the bad news and Hon-eydew brings a fool-proof machine to fix global warming.

Replace Billy Joel with Rowlf, Brangelina with Kermiggy, Nickelback half-time shows with Mahna Mahna half-time shows. Life would be better.

If the Muppets were real, the world would be a simpler, less frightening place. Tell me the House of Commons wouldn't be improved with Statler and Waldorf in their balcony as the Official Opposition.

HARPER: This legislation will keep Canadians safer.

STATLER: Who keeps us safe from you?

HARPER: You guys, knock it off.

WALDORF: Actually, that speech reminded us of an article in our favourite magazine.

HARPER: Really?

STATLER and WALDORF: Harper's Bizarre!

If we all lived like Muppets, peak oil wouldn't be a problem when you can fit 40 of us in the same car. There can be no racism in a world where love exists between pig and frog. And instead of being puppets of America, we'd just be American puppets.

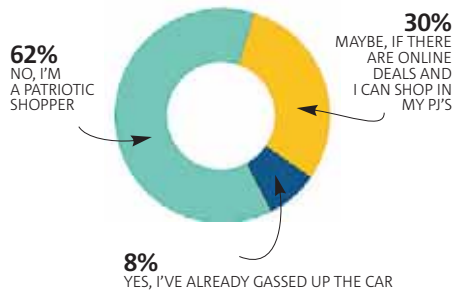

I'm not sure I've gotten to the bottom of the Muppets' appeal, but someday we'll find it, this rainbow connection. All I can say for sure is that my generation's belief in the Muppets is not cheap nostalgia, but completely felt. (Wocka wocka.)

3,000 is the average number of food cans in each 'sculpture'. Between 5 to 10 stackers work as a team for up to 8 hours to build a work. The hardest thing to figure out is how many cans are needed for each project, organizers told Metro.

There's no feeling like the self-satisfaction of finding the perfect gift — it combines the selflessness of giving with the smugness of showing up friends and family.

And finding that gift at the 11 day One of a Kind Christmas Show, where hand picked artisans peddle their unique wares, cuts down the chance of anyone else stealing your bright idea.

"I think people always want to be the hero, whether it's a birthday gift or a Christmas gift," says Patti Stewart, the show's director.

"It's not the same-old, same-old."

With the show in its 37th year, Stewart has to ensure that the collection of participating artisans isn't the same-old either.

"It's the artisans that make the show unique and fresh," she says.

The show's five permanent staff members spend much of the year tracking down new and exciting designers to bring to the Direct Energy Centre, making One of a Kind a

Besides moving product, the show offers independent designers like Ho a chance to break into a new market and the chance to speak with potential customers directly.

That interaction between creator and consumer is one of the perks of shopping at One of a Kind, and that hasn't gone unnoticed amongst organizers. One of a Kind Theatre, six short videos depicting artisans from

"People love to see the process of creation," says Stewart. "(They) feel more of a connection with what they've bought."

Every year One of a Kind staff encourage designers to use their particular talents to create a themed one-off piece.

This year's coffee cup design competition will net the winner a small cash prize for the most unique mug.

"The few that we've seen they look amazing," says Stewart. Popular with both customers and designers, this year there are over 100 entries. Not every discipline lends itself to crockery; functionality is not a requirement so designers like Ho are able to craft a cup out of scrap fabric using a hook and loop technique. The Shame of NC-17

► Release of Shame reignites debate over racy rating

The NC-17 rated Shame poses an intriguing test for the much-lamented rating and stands a chance of being one of the most notable adults-only releases since Last Tango in Paris or Midnight Cowboy.

When Steve McQueen's film about a sex addict (Michael Fassbender) arrives in theatres Dec. 5, it will have already found enthusiastic debate at film festivals, largely laudatory reviews and a significant presence in the Oscar race, where Fassbender is considered a top contender for a best actor nomination.

Though most films tagged by the Motion Pictures Association of America with an NC-17 rating either protest the decision or edit down to an R-rating, Fox Searchlight (which acquired Shame at the Toronto Film Festival) has accepted the NC-17 as fair. "We're releasing it not because of (the rating), but perhaps in spite of it," says Stephen Gilula, co-president of Fox Searchlight. "We just think it's a film that deserves to be seen."

An NC-17 rating still poses challenges for Shame and Fox Searchlight, but some believe the stigma of the rating may be fading.

The rating, which restricts anyone under the age of 18 from attending a movie, was created in 1990 after the X rating (which the MPAA had failed to trademark) was co-opted by the pornography industry. Since then, the most successful NC-17 film at the box office has been 1995's Showgirls, which earned ► Michael Fassbender is getting best actor Oscar buzz for his role as a sex addict in Shame.

Ratings pariah

- Cinemark, one of the largest movie theatre chains in the U.S., refuses to screen NC-17 rated films.
- Wal-Mart won't stock NC-17 rated DVDs.

$20.4 million and a great deal of scorn from critics.

On the whole, the rating has been taken by smaller, art-house films. Recent NC-17 releases have included Bernardo Bertolucci's The Dreamers (2004, Fox Searchlight), Ang Lee's Lust, Caution (2007, Focus Features) and Pedro Almodóvar's Bad Education (2004, Sony Pictures Classics).

"(Shame) is potentially an important step in the legitimate use of the NC-17," says John Fithian, president of the National Association of Theatre Owners.

"There just aren't very many movies released in the NC-17 rating anymore. Filmmakers and movie studios are inappropriately afraid of the rating."

Fithian says his association hopes to "eradicate the stigma" of NC-17, which he disputes. He calls the assertion that NC-17 films are limited in their advertising a myth.

Advertising a NC-17 film on television is limited to certain hours. Most newspapers will accept ads for a NC-17 film as long as they're tasteful.

"What we currently have is a system that's slightly flawed in the reluctance of filmmakers and distributors to use the NC-17," Fithian says.

► Simon Curtis says casting Michelle Williams as Marilyn Monroe 'was just a hunch.'

What Simon says

► Simon Curtis talks about directing his first feature film ► My Week With Marilyn is getting lots of critic love

Calling Simon Curtis a first-time director isn't exactly accurate, as the British filmmaker has been directing and producing — and winning awards for — work for television for 20 years. But yes, My Week With Marilyn is technically his first feature film. The film follows an eager newcomer (Eddie Redmayne) as he lands his first job in show business, serving as a lowly third assistant director on Sir Lawrence Olivier's collaboration with Marilyn Monroe, the Prince and the Showgirl. Curtis' film has already earned impressive acclaim — particularly for Michelle Williams' transformative performance as Monroe — and it heads into awards season under the stewardship of Harvey Weinstein. Not too shabby for a newcomer.

Can you talk about the casting of Michelle Williams as Marilyn?

All I can say is I just went with an instinct. I think she's a brilliant actress — a brilliant actress for bringing psychological texture to her parts — and I really like her. It was just a hunch.

It's also fascinating to have Sir Lawrence Olivier as the villain, in a sense.

I think he's definitely flawed, but I hope one ends up with sympathy for him. I didn't think of him in the sense of an antagonist, I just wish he'd done a better job supporting Marilyn.

Even though she would drive anyone crazy in terms of lateness and all that, his job was to support her.

The film deals a lot with the misconceptions about Marilyn and her intelligence level that still persist today.

Her hunger to be taken seriously as an actress — her hunger to be taken seriously, full stop — was obviously a huge driving force at this time in her life. And I love the audience when Olivier says, "Well, can't you just be sexy?" There's an audible groan. People totally get the scale of that mistake. And I do hope that people come out sympathizing with her.

Had you considered casting your wife, Elizabeth McGovern, as Vivien Leigh?

Well, she was making Downton Abbey so she wasn't really available. But let's put it this way; I know a lot about an actress, a beautiful woman, who is made to feel like her moment has passed now that she's in her 40s. I love that element of Vivien Leigh and think there should be that sense that should Marilyn have lived to 43, maybe she would've felt the same.

How is it as a "first-time director"?

Well, this is very different. It taught me that when you choose a film as a director you better be damn sure it's going to be something you can feel passionate about. Because you're going to be in a lot of test screenings and you're going to be under a lot of scrutiny. And I've been on the journey with Harvey [Weinstein], and his passion for the film has been second-to-none, do you know what I mean?

We're heading into awards season, of course. Do you process that at all, the early chatter?

Well, I certainly pay attention. I don't read it all because it would give me a nervous breakdown, but obviously this is a big year for films, isn't it? Much bigger than last year. Certainly with Michelle, it has been very exciting on the road with this film. People are genuinely excited to see this great American actress take on this great American icon and deliver. They feel excited about that.

McAvoy's magic voice

► James McAvoy lends his voice for the role of Santa's son in Arthur Christmas ► Talks about the key ingredient for a Christmas movie

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Having lent his voice to the upcoming movie Arthur Christmas, James McAvoy has some insight on the key ingredient for making cinematic holiday classics.

"That key ingredient is the threat that Christmas might not happen," said the X-Men: First Class star recently in a phone interview.

"It's an incredible thing — that all the kids in one night in the world get a gift by one guy."

"That myth is so hard to protect and that's what makes it so epic to do it as a movie."

That's precisely what happens in Arthur Christmas — an animated feature in which McAvoy voices the meek son of Santa who sets out to deliver presents to one poor child who was mistakenly overlooked by Old St. Nick.

"It's very easy for these films to be generic and also to be just a little bit formulaic," said McAvoy of holiday movies.

"(But) this film is an Aardman film."

"They make Wallace & Gromit, Chicken Run and they've made Flushed Away and all that. And what their movies have always had is exquisite detail as well as a fantastic sense of humour and real heart."

► James McAvoy says the key ingredient to a Christmas movie is the threat that Christmas might not happen.

There was certainly no shortage of detail in Arthur Christmas.

Featuring an army of Santa's little helpers, the filmmakers reportedly created a few hundred thousand elf characters — even though McAvoy acknowledges moviegoers will hardly notice them all.

"The fact is, you don't appreciate how many elves there are and how many different elves there are and they've all got personalities," explained McAvoy.

► "It's a lot less hard work I think than making normal movies. Someone else is animating for 2 or 3 years and not sleeping very much and sweating blood," said McAvoy. "(Actors) come in (and) after

"(But) that just adds to the overall thing I think and richness and integrity."

"But at the end of the two hours we go away and they start breaking their backs again."

► "(It's) really, really rewarding and very good fun," said McAvoy. "There's nothing better than satisfaction in an audience but when that audience is a bunch of kids, it's even more special."

A must read from Canada Reads

► Panelists will debate book choices live on CBC Radio

Actor Alan Thicke and Dragons' Den investor Arlene Dickinson are among the panellists lined up for the CBC non-fiction book debate Canada Reads: True Stories 2012.

The public broadcaster says Thicke will defend the hockey book The Game by Ken Dryden (Wiley Canada) and Dickinson plans to push for Marina Nemat's memoir Prisoner of Tehran.

Meanwhile, Juno Award-winning rapper Shad is backing the memoir Something Fierce by Carmen Aguirre.

Supermodel Stacey McKenzie will argue for On a Cold Road by Dave Bidini.

And Anne-France Goldwater, star of Quebec's reality-TV courtroom show l'Arbitre, has chosen The Tiger by John Vaillant.

The panellists will debate the books live on CBC Radio from Feb. 6-9 to determine Canada's "must-read non-fiction title for 2012."

The shows will also be live-streamed on CBC Books and air daily on CBC's documentary channel, with recap specials the following weekend on CBC-TV and CBC Radio One.

This is the first time Canada Reads has featured non-fiction titles.

Last year The Best Laid Plans by Terry Fallis won Canada Reads.

The 'bad girl' belongs to Brad

Angelina Jolie has changed a lot from her wilder younger days, but she insists there's some of that still in there.

"I'm still a bad girl. I still have that inside of me," she tells 60 Minutes in an interview.

"It's just in its place now. It belongs to Brad — or our adventures."

Jolie is just happy she made it through her more rebellious period.

"I didn't die young, so I am very lucky," she says.

"For many reasons, I shouldn't be here."

► Divorcing couple met recently at 'Kabbalah House'

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

While Demi Moore may have filed for divorce from Ashton Kutcher, she's apparently not done talking to him, as the pair reportedly met at the Beverly Hills home of a friend the weekend after her divorce announcement, according to Us Weekly.

"It's affiliated with Kabbalah, and some of the people who go there refer to it as the 'Kabbalah House,'" a source says of their meeting place, where the couple are said to have previously visited for Kabbalah-themed marriage counselling.

Kutcher and Moore arrived separately but were seen leaving at the same time.

► Ashton Kutcher and Demi Moore

"They seemed very sombre," the source says.

But apparently Moore has been anything but sombre since deciding to ditch Kutcher, even reportedly appearing chipper and cheerful at a nail salon the morning of the divorce announcement.

"Demi's been telling friends that it gets easier every day," a source says. "She's very optimistic."

DISCERNING DRINKER'S RECIPE of the week... Simon Difford

Simon Difford is an award-winning drinks writer famous the world over for his discerning palate and encyclopaedic knowledge about the world of cocktails. For more than 3000 cocktail recipes, product launches and global bar reviews visit www.diffordsguide.com

Forget the 'Vodka Red Bull', this is the cocktail connoisseur's way of combining caffeine and vodka – and your way of creating a whole new meaning to inviting someone back for coffee. This cocktail was created by famous London bartender Dick Bradsell and adapted from his 'Vodka Espresso', invented in 1983 at the Soho Brasserie, London.

ESPRESSO MARTINI

To make the cocktail, put all the ingredients in a cocktail shaker, and fill to the top with ice. Shake vigorously for at least 15 seconds to ensure the espresso has cooled completely and that there is proper dilution from the ice. Fine strain the mixture into a chilled martini glass and top with three whole coffee beans as a beautiful garnish.

2 shots Ketel One vodka
1½ Hot espresso coffee
½ shot Sugar syrup (2:1 sugar/water)
¼ Kahlúa coffee liqueur

"Simon says..." "The coffee is the important part of this cocktail – the espresso you use needs to be fresh and very, very strong. Additionally, although it might seem counter-intuitive, it works much better if the espresso is hot – even though you are shaking it with cold ice."

▶ You don't have to drive south of the border to get Black Friday discounts

HEATHER BUCHAN
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Tomorrow marks Black Friday — the biggest sales event of the year in the United States — with retailers slashing prices on virtually everything. Held the day after American Thanksgiving (this year, it falls on Nov. 25), it traditionally marks the kick-off to the holiday shopping season.

In the past, many Canadians flocked to their closest border crossing in order to take advantage of the U.S. deals, but rather than packing up the car, making the road trip south and waiting in lineups for hours, more and more Canadians will be journeying online for cross-border shopping deals this year.

According to a recent Ipsos

Cyber Monday — the online cousin to Black Friday — takes place on the Monday following the U.S. Thanksgiving weekend and features a number of discounts on shopping websites.

survey conducted on behalf of Visa Canada, 34 per cent of Canadian online shoppers plan to

Resources

Some helpful sites to help you navigate Black Friday:

- ▶ blackfriday.info: The official site for all the 2011 Black Friday ads.
- ▶ BlackFriday.FM: You can sign up for email updates and check out sales from your favourite stores.
- ▶ TGIBlackFriday.com: Offers one-click filters to see what popular deals are available online.
- ▶ redflagdeals.com: Canada's largest bargain hunting website has an entire section devoted to Black Friday deals.

shop online at American retailers this Black Friday. This is an increase of six per cent from last year.

"Over the past few years we have seen a steady increase in the number of Canadians who look for deals south of the border on Black Friday," says Stephanie Wallat, business leader for e-commerce with Visa Canada. As a result, many U.S. retailers seem to be taking notice of the Canadian interest and have extended their shipping to Canada and abroad.

In a bid to keep Canadians from cross-border shopping this weekend, some Canadian retailers are ramping up sales of their own. Toys R Us Canada announced that it's holding a half-price event this weekend. And The Bay, Zellers and Home Outfitters, Future Shop and Best Buy will also be offering special sales events this weekend.

Shopping tips

Make the most of Black Friday by following these savvy shopping tips:

- ▶ Do your research before shopping. Go to a retailer's site early, pick out everything you want, do price comparisons and add items you want to your shopping cart.
- ▶ Find out the full cost of the item you want. Borderlinx (borderlinx.com/visa/ca) provides a calculator that estimates the entire cost of a purchase, including currency conversion, taxes, duties and shipping.
- ▶ Canadian duties on apparel are much higher than on electronics. That could eat into some of your cross-border savings.
- ▶ How do you know if you're really getting a great deal? Experts say that if the item you want isn't 40 to 50 per cent off, leave it behind.

Canadian retailers get in on the action

More Black Friday bargain hunting is beginning to happen in Canada, says an Ottawa-based marketing expert.

"Surveys across Canada show that this year, cross-border shopping is going to be down," said Brian Card, president of the Ottawa-based market research firm CRG consulting.

But that flies in the face of travel data from Statistics Canada showing same-day car trips to and from the U.S. by Canadians are at their highest level since 1998 at 7.2 million in the second quarter of 2011 and 7.1 million in the third.

BMO economist Robert Kavcic said the numbers correlate with the rise in value of the loonie versus the greenback.

He agrees with Card that Canadian retailers are beginning to hold their own Black Friday sales.

of Canadians say they intend to head south of the border on Friday for America's biggest shopping day of the year.

Is it worth the drive?

Hordes of shoppers, including thousands of Canadians, are gearing up to spend their hard-earned money south of the border during America's largest shopping event of the year.

Black Friday enthusiast Danielle Graydon, who heads to Bellevue, Wash., every year, says the event is a good place to finish Christmas shopping in one trip.

"Last year I got all my Christmas shopping done for $350," she said. "At some stores you'll get discount on top of discount. The trip is worth it because you end up saving hundreds."

Graydon describes Canada's Boxing Day as a "pathetic" alternative to America's busiest shopping day. ● KENDRA WONG

Hot items

According to Ipsos Reid, clothing and accessories will be the most popular purchases tomorrow, followed closely by books, movies and music.

Some of the steepest price cuts are on electronics, including televisions, computers, DVD players, music players, video game consoles and small appliances. Leave home furnishings purchases until Boxing Day sales.

Miranda Kerr's thong song

TINA CHADHA
LIFE@METRONews.ca
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

For the first time in her five years of walking down the runway as a Victoria's Secret Angel, the Australian bombshell Miranda Kerr had the honour of wearing the $2.5 million Fantasy Treasure Bra. And that's just months after giving birth to her first baby with husband, Orlando Bloom. We ask her the question every woman wants to know.

Besides the $2 million bra, what's the biggest difference between walking in a high fashion catwalk show such as, say, Balenciaga versus Victoria's Secret? The great thing with Victoria's Secret is they really encourage us girls to interact with the audience and show a bit of personality, so it's a totally different thing for sure, but both of them are good in their own right. The Victoria's Secret show is quite a theatrical performance. I love to be in the

"[Generally the] first step would be to blow dry then apply a volume lotion in your hair. Once we blow dry all that through we spray in [Orlando Pita] Elevate Texture Spray. Then we do the curling iron set. Then we send the girls to makeup, after they're done we brush it all out."

moment and feel the music.

You lost the baby weight ridiculously fast. Can you give us a breakdown of your daily diet?

Everyday is different but I like to start the day with a fresh green juice with kale, spinach, cucumber, beets and lemon. Then half an hour later, I have a power smoothie, which has sun warrior protein powder, chia seeds, maca powder, raw cacao, bee pollen, goji berries, noni juice, vitamineral green and coconut water. Then an hour after that I'll have oatmeal or eggs. That's my three-course power breakfast. For lunch I might have some grilled fish with goat cheese or baby spinach salad and olives. Sometimes I'll have a sweet potato. At dinner, I'll have a lentil soup and maybe some chicken. And I love to have my salads with avocado, feta and spinach.

It sounds like a lot of careful maintenance. What does your workout regimen look like?

I've been practicing yoga for over 12 years. And after I had the baby I started doing Pilates. That was really helpful. But three weeks leading up to the VS show, I start working out five times a week using a resistance band and leg weights.

Is the Fantasy bra heavy?
No it's not so heavy but my wings are really heavy.

Where does one go after you've modeled the $2.5 million bra? What do the next five years look like for you?

I really want to expand my organic skin-care line all over the world. I created a line that I personally wanted — it's a certified organic range — but couldn't find. Kora organics has been my passion and my idea. I invested the money behind the product. I blog [on the site] once a week.

Adriana Lima

"I think working out makes your skin glow. It's a natural detox. I also drink a lot of water and coconut water. For makeup, I use lots of black mascara, lip gloss and that's it."

Lady Gaga opens Gaga's Workshop at Barney's department store in New York

Of a dress that impressed

► InStyle fashion director Hal Rubenstein takes a look back at 100 of the most memorable gowns of our time

Some dresses you remember: Michelle Obama's inaugural gown, Coco Chanel's little black dress, Cher's Oscar getups. They make an impression on the collective culture beyond a fleeting fashion trend.

InStyle fashion director Hal Rubenstein has counted down his favourites in a new book called 100 Unforgettable Dresses.

"Dresses are important for different reasons, but how they are unified is that they are not all simply about fashion. They hit us emotionally, psychologically or affect how we perceive beauty," he says.

A great dress also can jump-start a career, he says, and that's not just limited to fashion. Mrs. Obama's white, one-shouldered gown for the inaugural balls literally made Jason Wu a household name overnight, but stars as diverse as Phyllis Diller and Elizabeth Hurley parlayed a splash of style into celebrity.

Hurley in Gianni Versace's safety-pin gown in 1994 for the premiere of Four Weddings and a Funeral is the first dress featured in the book — which is "not quite" random order, Rubenstein says.

► Marilyn Monroe's Happy Birthday, Mr. President dress.

► Elizabeth Hurley, wearing a dress designed by Gianni Versace.

"The Versace safety-pin dress is the greatest example of the power of clothing. It made a woman famous overnight. Elizabeth Hurley was a pretty girl on Hugh Grant's arm who no one knew. The next day it was, 'Who's that girl?'"

Modern A-listers Sarah Jessica Parker and Cate Blanchett join the late style icons Audrey Hepburn, Jacqueline Kennedy and Grace Kelly as women who successfully made fashion part of their identity, he says. They show a deep understanding of fashion without ever seeming burdened by it, he describes. Not all their outfits were showstoppers, but there rarely have been missteps — at least not missteps for the signature look they carved for themselves.

Blanchett is one of the few people who could have pulled off Alexander McQueen's Where Eagles Fly gown, worn to the Oscars just weeks after the designer's suicide in 2010, Rubenstein says. On her, the dramatic embellishment was a complement to her persona as someone who makes strong choices. On someone else, it might have overshadowed the person wearing it.

Kennedy figured out how to use clothing as a political tool. With her appearance in France at Versailles in 1961 in an ivory gown with floral beading all over the bodice by Hubert de Givenchy, she changed the world's perception of how a new generation of Americans might dress.

"She knew how to present a picture," Rubenstein says.

Diller, the comedian — an uncon-

She wore it wow

Two of Rubenstein's favourite behind-the-seams stories:

- The 'revenge' dress worn by Diana, the Princess of Wales, in the summer of 1994 stole the thunder from a TV interview in which Prince Charles admitted marital infidelities. The next day, Diana's picture was splashed on front pages wearing an off-the-shoulder, short black dress by London boutique owner Christina Stambolian that she had stashed in her closet for three years, waiting for the right occasion.
- McQueen's 2006 hologram gown, worn by Kate Moss — or a 3D image of Moss — topped all the theatrical, elaborate creations that McQueen had dreamed up before, Rubenstein says. The feat of technology, showmanship and craftsmanship, not to mention the gown itself, featuring cascades of organza, created an enduring image of McQueen's genius.

ventional choice for the book, Rubenstein allows — used her clothes as a warm-up act. There wasn't one dress that was necessarily her calling card, but she had a wardrobe full of glitzy — sometimes garish — tent dresses that she'd often wear with go-go boots, gloves and a long cigarette holder.

Rubenstein describes her look in the book as, "a violent cross between a Pucci mini and a Hawaiian muumuu attacked by a rhinestone stun gun and a flock of peacocks."

Kooky? Yes. Yet, it was a smart move, says Rubenstein, because the audience was smiling before she opened her mouth.

Every dress in the book tells a story, and that's why, at 35,000 words, it's more for reference than the coffee table, Rubenstein says.

"It's not called the 100 Most Beautiful Dresses or 100 Most Fashionable Dresses. Three-quarters of these have been stuck in my head my whole life. I didn't need to find the 100 dresses, 75 of them just showed up in just a couple of minutes after I had the idea," he says. "It's the culmination of how fashion has impacted the culture in my world. I'm somebody who grew up in a culture of red carpet, fashion, comedy — and the dresses come at you from all angles, not just the runway."

Mugler gets a makeover

► The world has gone Gaga over Nicola Formichetti ► He pairs with powerful pals to put a spin on an iconic brand

THE CANADIAN PRESS/NATHAN DENETTE

► Nicola Formichetti, right, creative director and Sebastien Peigne, womenswear designer for Mugler.

As if heading up a French fashion house isn't enough to keep Nicola Formichetti busy, he has stylewatchers buzzing beyond the runway as the creative force behind some of Lady's Gaga's most outlandish looks.

Formichetti took the helm of Mugler last year as creative director of the famed namesake label of Thierry Mugler. But he has also left his imprint on the fashion world and pop culture as Gaga's stylist, helping outfit her for videos, album covers and the stage — including the now-infamous raw meat dress.

After meeting on a photo shoot, the electro-pop diva asked Formichetti to work on her performance for the 2009 MuchMusic Video Awards where Gaga wore another memorable creation — a pyrotechnic bra. It sparked a bit of trouble for Formichetti as he prepared to leave Canada with the wired metal contraption in a silver case.

"I was stopped at the Toronto airport because I was carrying the bra and they opened up (the case) and literally, it looked like a bomb," he recalled.

Luckily, a sharp-eyed observer came to the rescue.

"Someone actually recognized (it): They said 'Oh my God — that's Lady Gaga's bra!' So they just let me go," he said, laughing.

"I was almost going to jail, probably."

Gaga has been actively

"We were very interested right at the beginning in terms of what he's done over the years, and I was a big fan. We wanted to continue what he's done and kind of show the younger generation, and also the older fans and we wanted to just continue the legacy. But also, I suppose, by making it contemporary — that's our twist on it." NICOLA FORMICHETTI ON THIERRY MUGLER involved with Mugler, walking the runway in the label's fall-winter show last March and appearing in a video for the label's most recent showcase in September.

Formichetti said collaborating with the singer-songwriter is "very organic" and the creative process works at an altogether different pace than that of his label.

"Mugler is much, much more you have to think about the whole vision, but with her, it's about a really abstract idea to make into reality and then you move on again."

Formichetti was in Toronto last week with Mugler women's designer Sebastien Peigne at The Room at the Bay's downtown Toronto flagship location for a meet-and-greet with the media and evening cocktail event.

Formichetti oversees Peigne, formerly of Balenciaga, and head menswear designer Romain Kremer, who also designs his own signature label.

Formichetti said they set out to put their own stamp on the brand while also trying to remain true to Mugler's creative vision.

"We were very interested right at the beginning in terms of what he's done over the years, and I was a big fan," he said.

"We wanted to continue what he's done and kind of show the younger generation, and also the older fans and we wanted to just continue the legacy. But also, I suppose, by making it contemporary — that's our twist on it."

"I learned so much at Balenciaga about the cut of the clothes and the pro-

A taste of

Sebastien Peigne said the forthcoming fall-winter line will see the emergence of a new Mugler woman, combining iconic inspiration from the label's archives and the more personal, deconstructed style that marked their first two collections.

In the meantime, Formichetti said he is enjoying tapping into his various creative passions and partnering with other like-minded talents in the process.

"I don't really come from that school of, like, 'Here's my vision....' I'm not a trained fashion designer," he said.

portion of the silhouettes so I really wanted to bring that legacy of Balenciaga at Mugler," said Peigne.

Formichetti said with their debut collection they drew on bits and pieces of the label's archives that they loved to combine them and create a "harder, sexier feeling of the Mugler woman." For their spring-summer line, they opted for a different approach. "It was much more abstract and softer and more romantic. For us, that was Mugler too," Formichetti said.

"It's not so well-known that he's done (those) kind of clothes, but he's done beautiful clothes — long, long floaty dresses. It looked a little bit completely different for some people, but for us, it was still in keeping with the Mugler feeling."

The fashion force that is Nicola Formichetti has a pretty impressive resumé

- Among his many roles, Formichetti also serves as fashion director of both Vogue Hommes Japan and Japanese clothing brand Uniqlo, a reflection of his wide-ranging interests in the industry.
- "I never went into fashion with one goal. I didn't even know what I wanted to do to," he said.
- "In a way, directing a brand is the perfect job for me because I get to do all these different aspects that I do and focus on one thing," he added.

► This season, the chintzy Christmas lights needn't be the only beacons of brightness ► Get noticed!

If the dark days of winter aren't depressing enough, we choose to garb ourselves in outerwear that wouldn't look out of place on a Victorian funeral march. Why don't we stop mourning for summer and sling on something bold and bright all year long. After all, it's not that risqué, seeing as most men won't hesitate come June to pull on some outlandish Hawaiian-print shirt.

► NYC stores keep up holiday window tradition with tech-infused touches

Whether you have a light wallet or are big spender, window shopping can be enjoyed by almost everyone. Manhattan's most famous Midtown retailers are known for splashy displays that have become as much a holiday tradition here as the Rockefeller Center Christmas tree or sidewalk Santas.

Store executives say they see the windows as their

"I think New York being what New York is — it's the window capital of the world — it sees people from all over the world come to New York to experience the holiday," says Paul Olszewski, Macy's director of windows.

rated into displays, and photos will beam from the windows as well as from the retailer's Facebook page. At Macy's there are touch screens to design a 3D ornament that's then sent back to your cellphone.

"It's all the kids who totally get how to do this," Olszewski says.

Still, it's largely left to the reindeer, snowmen and jolly St. Nick to spread the cheer. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'BILD'-ING TORONTO

ROOFTOP SURFING

JOE VACCARO
HOME
@METRONEWS.CA

At BILD we promote that our members are "Building a Greater GTA" as we advocate for planning, building and business policies and practices that will help the GTA become the prosperous region and Toronto the world-class city we all want it to be. It's an ongoing process but this Tuesday we witnessed a major step towards prosperity as Build Toronto selected Tridel as the first of six partnerships to be announced later this year.

Build Toronto is an independent and self-funding real estate and development corporation created to unlock the value of City real estate through several private/public partnerships. On November 22, Tridel, a long-standing BILD member, was selected as the first partner company to work with Build Toronto.

This doesn't come as a surprise because Tridel has a long history of building homes and communities across Ontario. It takes a world-class builder to help build a world-class city, and this one's resumé boasts more than 80 years worth of expertise with more than 70,000 homes across the GTA to back it all up!

This partnership will convert a paid parking lot at 10 York Street into a 75-storey condo worth about $295 million that promises to create new jobs, pump tax revenue into the city and inject funds into the local community. This is just the first of six partnerships to move the city forward and judging by some of the comments I overheard Tuesday morning, I'm not the only one excited about this initiative!

Toronto Councillor Doug Ford was overheard saying "developments like this allow our city to thrive" while Tridel's president Leo DelZotto said that this partnership "furthers our commitment not only to condo building, but to city building."

Tridel is the winner of BILD's Home Builder of the Year award in 2004 and continues to be a regular finalist in this category. The company has also won BILD's High-Rise Green Builder of the Year Award four years out of the five it has been awarded. Tridel and Build Toronto will be seeking a LEED certification for the building, and the developers are committed to ensuring that it exceeds the City of Toronto's Green Building Standards.

On behalf of the Association, I'd like to congratulate Tridel and encourage Build Toronto to consider BILD members for its remaining five partnerships as we work together to build a greater GTA!

Increase your condo's value

► Make your condo stand out from the pack with these four easy upgrades

Many condominium units are chosen from a generic selection of floor plans that include builder-grade fixtures. Builder-grade keeps the costs down, but everything from flooring to cabinetry is the same basic design. So what can you do to upgrade the look and increase the value of your condo unit?

Here's four easy upgrades that will make your unit really stand out, that you can do without a whole lot of construction.

► Edge lighting can greatly improve the look of your condo.

Faucets and bathroom fixtures

These are an easy upgrade that have impact. Kohler Canada makes a magnificent line of kitchen and bathroom upgrades that can be easily installed by a plumber without a lot of work. Check out Kohler's Refinia polished chrome faucets for example, with soft lines inspired by nature that

Celebrate with flameless candles

► A safer and brighter idea for holiday entertaining ► Enhance your decor with these modern touches

DESIGN CENTRE

KARL LOHNES
HOME@
METRONEWS.CA

The holidays are all about creating a magical mood in your home for entertaining; great music, special food and drink, and of course lots of candles to help set a festive mood.

I love to use candles everywhere around the house when having people over, but am also cautious about leaving them to burn on their own.

Flameless candles are a great option to real ones, and although you don't get some of the scents that are available with the real thing, the flicker and light that is cast would fool almost anyone.

Made of quality wax or plastic resin, the candle's inside houses an LED light that flickers and is shaped like a small flame.

The tops can have the look of dripping wax coming down the sides for a traditional look or a clean-edge look for a more modern esthetic.

There is a small switch on the bottom that controls the on/off of the LED light.

Flameless candles are made in all standard candle sizes, from tiny votives to large three-wick style pillar candles.

I like the white or off-white four-inch pillar size candles as they are most classic and will be neutral enough to use year round.

As there are no safety worries with flameless candles, I like to display in places that I would never dream of using real ones — lining them up the staircase, outside on the front porch (no worries of them blowing out on a cold windy night), on window ledges, within the Christmas tree or in guest rooms.

For a realistic candle look, place them in glass hurricanes and add some decorative touches around the base like cranberries, holly or small metallic ornaments.

You can also use a large grouping to adorn an unused fireplace; fill the empty fireplace with birch logs, glass ornaments and a variety of flameless candle sizes.

Depending on the quality of batteries that come with the candles, the LED lights burn from 24 to 100 hours.

Flameless candles take a variety of batteries; triple A and watch battery styles are most popular — it's always smart to keep some extras on hand during the busy entertaining season.

WOOLLENS WANT CLEANING

Dear Charles the butler, My mother says I need to wash woollens for the winter. Is this true? I've never washed my kids' woollens or any woollens for that matter. Surprised Mom

Dear Surprised Mom,

Wool gloves, scarves and leg warmers all need to be cleaned on a regular basis. Remember anything we touch and use gets dirty from the natural oils and dirt on our hands and in the air around us.

Not to mention everything these garments come into contact with like the school bus, grocery store carts and school hallways.

So how to clean them? Well if you have a front loading washing machine you most likely have a specific cycle that will allow you to safely launder wool garments. Note that top loaders will not always work as the centre agitator will damage the wool.

Remember to use half the amount of recommended soap, as you can always add more soap in a second cleaning but too much soap is hard to get out of the garment. Once washed, put the garment flat out on a towel and let them dry naturally. Do not put them in the dryer, ever!

Now for those of you without a front loading machine, you can still easily wash these by hand with products such as Woolight® in a laundry bin. Just follow the label directions. You will be shocked at what you see come out of these garments and once washed they will be fresh and clean-smelling.

KEY QUESTION

LEGAL MATTERS

JEFFREY COWAN
HOME
@METRONEWS.CA

Q: I have purchased a home in a rural area and am moving from the city for a quieter life. I have retained a lawyer in town to assist me with the sale of my city home and the purchase of my country house. Everything has gone very smoothly however, on closing, the keys for my new property were supposed to be left with the realtor out of town. My real estate agent who found me the new property is not being very co-operative and I have a moving van full of furniture waiting to be unloaded. What should I do?

A: The question of keys is a somewhat complicated one when it comes to real estate transactions.

Usually, the keys are given to your lawyer so that when the transaction is complete, they can provide them to the purchaser.

However, in cases where people are moving long distances alternate arrangements are often made.

In this instance, the realtor was holding the keys because he or she was local and it made the most sense to pick those keys up from them.

If your agent is being unco-operative, perhaps you can get your lawyer involved in order to insist that they provide keys in a timely manner. After all, you have paid for the home, your agent has earned a commission on their efforts and the issue of providing a key should be the least of your worries.

The magic of Morocco at home

► Bring the flavours of the Middle East to your kitchen with this easy tagine recipe for lamb

NEWS CANADA

Moroccan cuisine is renowned for its delicate balance of sweet and spicy flavours.

Try this easy slow-cooker tagine recipe with some convenient grocery store items to help you during the week.

Preparation:

1 In large heavy frying pan, heat oil over medium-high heat. Sprinkle lamb with salt and pepper. Cook for 10 to 12 minutes, turning occasionally, or until browned.

2 Transfer lamb to slow cooker. Stir onions and garlic into frying pan, reduce heat to medium-low and cook for 4 to 6 minutes or until softened. Transfer onion mixture to slow cooker.

3 Stir carrots, broth and sauce into slow cooker. Cover slow cooker, turn

Ingredients:

- 2 tbsp (25 mL) canola oil
- 1 boneless lamb shoulder, about 1 ½ lb (875 g)
- 1/2 tsp (2 mL) salt
- 1/2 tsp (2 mL) freshly ground black pepper
- 1 large white onion, halved and thinly sliced
- 2 cloves garlic, sliced
- 2 large carrots, peeled and cut diagonally in 1 ½ inch (4 cm) long pieces
- 3 cups (750 mL) sodium-reduced chicken broth
- 1 bottle (350 mL) PC Memories of Morocco Sauce heat to low and cook for 10 to 12 hours or until lamb is very tender when prodded with fork.

4 Transfer carrots to a bowl; set aside. Remove lamb from slow cooker; using two forks, shred meat. Place lamb and carrots

Shrimp, sausage and bison ... on a stick!

MATTHEW MEAD/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Middle Eastern Sage-Shrimp Bison Skewers

► Makes 40 bite-size skewers.

► Make a batch of these skewers to enjoy for a holiday gathering ► The combination of meats, spices makes for a great conversation appetizer

These Middle Eastern-style skewers combine a potent but delicious seasoning blend (gobs of black pepper and ground star anise) with a mix of ground sausage, bison and shrimp. The result is deliciously meaty and warmly spicy.

And since the holidays are a time to entertain, we prepared these as tiny party-friendly skewers.

If you'd prefer them for dinner, you could use larger skewers with more meat (you'll need to adjust the cooking time). You can also skip the sticks entirely and form them into meatballs.

While I favoured bison in this blend because it is naturally lean, you could also use lean ground beef or turkey.

If you want to offer a simple dipping sauce for these skewers, mix together equal parts toasted sesame oil, seasoned rice vinegar and soy sauce, as well as a bit of garlic powder and finely diced fresh chives.

Preparation:

1 Coat a rimmed baking sheet with cooking spray.

2 In a spice grinder, combine star anise and peppercorns. Grind until reduced to a fine powder. Set aside.

3 In a food processor, combine sausages, shrimp, onion and sage. Pulse until coarsely ground. Transfer to a large bowl. Add bison, salt, star anise-pepper mixture and breadcrumbs. Use your hands to mix well.

4 Break off a walnut-size chunk of the mixture and form it in an oblong about 2.5 cm (1 inch) thick at the centre. Repeat with remaining meat mixture, arranging meat on prepared baking sheet. You should have about 40 oblongs. Broil for 3 minutes, then turn and broil for another 3 minutes or until cooked through. Alternatively, skewers can be cooked on a medium-high greased grill for about 3 minutes per side.

Tip: When grilling, the skewers can be inserted prior to cooking. Avoid this when using the broiler; the more intense heat of the broiler will burn the skewers.

5 Insert toothpicks or short skewers lengthwise into each just before serving.

Ingredients:

- 1 star anise
- 5 mL (1 tsp) black or mixed peppercorns
- 3 raw sweet Italian turkey sausages, casings removed
- 250 g (½ lb) raw shrimp, shells and tails removed
- 1 small onion, quartered
- 5 large leaves fresh sage
- 500 g (1 lb) ground bison
- 5 mL (1 tsp) salt
- 250 mL (1 cup) panko breadcrumbs

THE HOCKEY NEWS

ADAM PROTEAU

TORONTO@METRONEWS.CA

Tim Connolly was an easy target of jokesters and cynics who called him fragile and undependable when he missed 12 of the Maple Leafs' first 18 games. But those folks clearly aren't paying attention to what the veteran centreman has given the team in the 10 games he's played. And they're looking pretty foolish right now.

With seven assists and 10 points — including a goal and two helpers in Tuesday's 7-1 shellacking of Tampa Bay — what Connolly has done is produce at a point-per-game pace. In fact, if you look at his totals the past three games, you see he's producing at double that rate and demonstrating why Leafs GM Brian Burke gave him a two-year, $9.5 million contract in the summer.

Of course, there was no shortage of people on the other side of Lake Ontario who snickered into their Buffalo wings when the deal was announced.

During his eight seasons in Western New York with the Sabres, the 30-year-old Connolly played 82 games only twice, missed 148 games over the course of three seasons and was a non-factor in three of the four times he played in the post-season with Buffalo.

But again, when he was healthy, Connolly was always a productive player. In 627 NHL games before he got to Toronto, the Syracuse native amassed 277 assists and 395 points with the Sabres and New York Islanders, who drafted him fifth overall in 1999. According to a Western Conference GM who spoke on condition his name not be used, Burke knew exactly what he was getting in

"When he was healthy, Connolly was always a productive player. In 627 NHL games before he got to Toronto, the Syracuse native amassed 277 assists and 395 points."

Connolly's skill set.

"When (Leafs star winger) Phil Kessel was in Boston, he played some of his best games because of (injured Bruins centre) Marc Savard — that's what I think Burke saw in Connolly," said the GM. "Plans have changed because they're getting good chemistry and great results with Kessel and (Toronto centre) Tyler Bozak on the same line, so they can use Connolly to spark that second line, especially after (Mikhail) Grabovski was injured."

Indeed, with Grabovski

on the sidelines for at least another week, if not longer, Connolly has an opportunity to jump-start the offensive production of struggling second-line winger Nikolai Kulemin and Clarke MacArthur.

If Connolly's history is any indication, Leafs fans would be wise to expect the occasional interruption in service from him. But they have every reason to also expect him to keep Toronto in the playoff hunt.

Final game for B.C. Lions coach?

► Buono says he'll make decision on CFL future after Grey Cup ► He's seeking his fifth title as a head coach

He's won more games than any coach in CFL history and has the B.C. Lions poised to become just the fourth team in league history to win the Grey Cup.

But when Wally Buono walks off the B.C. Place Stadium turf Sunday, it could be his last time as a CFL head coach.

The B.C. Lions head coach/GM said yesterday during the Grey Cup coaches news conference that win or lose Sunday, he will take time this off-season to decide whether he will return to the sidelines in 2012.

"I said at the beginning of the year the relevance of success or failure is not related to whether I coach again or not," Buono said. "Today, I'm coaching.

The only season a Buono-coached team hasn't made the playoffs. He left the Stampeders after posting a 6-12 record.

"After Sunday, I'll sit down and resolve it. That's the agreement Mr. Braley (Lions owner David Braley) and I have and I'm going to stick to my part of the agreement.

"When I committed to signing for three years I told David I would be committed to the contract, not necessarily to the two roles. Winning or losing is not going to have any effect at all."

Buono reportedly is under contract with B.C. until January 2014. He will be chasing a fifth Grey Cup win as a head coach and second with the Lions when the club faces the Winnipeg Blue Bombers on Sunday.

Buono has become synonymous with winning throughout his illustrious CFL career. He is the winningest head coach in league history with 254 regular-season victories and Sunday will chase his fifth Grey Cup win as a head coach.

The native of Potenza, Italy, who grew up in Montreal, also won two Grey Cups as linebacker and punter with the Montreal Alouettes (1974, '77).

Big league GTA rink moving forward without NHL tenant

- Planned Markham facility not relying on pro team
- Price of 2nd squad would likely balloon in Leafs region

An NHL-sized building is being planned for the outskirts of Toronto, but a number of hurdles remain before a second NHL team calls the region home.

Yesterday, GTA Sports and Entertainment confirmed that it hopes to build a 20,000-seat arena northeast of downtown Toronto in Markham.

"After considerable work and discussions, we're looking forward to bringing our official proposal to the town of Markham in the near future," said W. Graeme Roustan, the company's chairman and CEO, in a statement.

$300M

The $300-million arena is being planned as part of a major entertainment complex and could be ready as soon as 2014, according to GTA Sports and Entertainment.

While the NHL is aware of the development, the league has been consistent in not making any guarantees to groups involved with arena projects.

If at some point there was an NHL team to be moved to Markham, a deal would likely have to be worked out with the Toronto Maple Leafs. For example, when Anaheim was awarded a NHL team in 1992, half of its $50-million US expansion fee went to the L.A. Kings to help offset potential revenue loss.

Even without pro sports, Roustan believes the building will be ideal for concerts and other events.

"Markham is recognized as Canada's high-tech capital and the most ethnically diverse community in Canada, making it an ideal location for this facility," said Roustan.

Public Open House Bathurst Station – Preliminary Design

Metrolinx and the TTC invite you to an Open House to view the preliminary design of Bathurst Station and to share your input with the design team.

Date: Monday, November 28

Time: 7:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.

Location: Beth Sholom Synagogue,
1445 Eglinton Avenue West
(enter at west side)

Take Transit: The Open House is just steps across the street from Eglinton West Station at Allen Road.

Online Consultation

Can't make it to the Open House? No problem. Please view the displays online beginning November 28th and send us your feedback at www.thecrosstown.ca

Rapid and reliable underground transit is coming to the centre of Toronto. The Eglinton-Scarborough Crosstown is a 25 kilometre transit project that will connect riders from Black Creek Drive to Scarborough City Centre. The Crosstown will move Torontonians to work, school and play faster than ever before – slashing travel times and enhancing our economy and our environment.

The Crosstown will bring new transit stations into several neighbourhoods along Eglinton, including yours.

Tebow makes believers out of Broncos

► Young QB leading Denver back to NFL relevancy ► Some criticize pivot for his displays of religious devotion

By now, most people know Tim Tebow, the quirky quarterback. Hardworking work in progress, imperfect passer getting by on more will than skill, bigger on moxie than mechanics.

Then there's Tim Tebow, the person. Popular and polarizing. Galvanizes backers and backbiters alike. People love him or loathe him.

There he is on TV, professing his faith and talking about how he was more excited to build a children's hospital in the Philippines than he was in leading the Denver Broncos to an improbable last-minute win over the New York Jets.

Even though the Broncos were 1-4 without him and 4-1 with him, including two fourth-quarter comebacks, Tebow's detractors call him a phoney, fake and scripted.

► The Broncos' Tim Tebow celebrates after running for the game-winning touchdown in Sunday's last-minute win over the New York Jets in Denver.

This, despite guiding the Broncos back to 5-5, a game behind Oakland in the AFC West.

"He really is genuine and the emotion and the passion that you see him out there playing with, he has the same passion off the field with those type of things, the charity things and the missionary things," receiver Eddie Royal said. "He just lives that way."

Royal said Tebow should be hailed a hero by more than just the Tebowmaniacs who have been in his corner since he starred at the University of Florida.

Still, some people have a problem with him wearing his religion on his sleeve.

For example, former

"He walks the walk. A guy like that in today's society, in my mind, ought to be celebrated, not scrutinized to the level that he is."

BRONCOS COACH JOHN FOX
ON TIM TEBOW

Broncos QB Jake Plummer told KGME-AM in Phoenix this week: "I think he's a winner and I respect that about him. I think that when he accepts the fact that we know that he loves Jesus Christ, then I think I'll like him a little better. I don't hate him because of that. I just would rather not have to hear that every time he takes a good snap or makes a good hand-off."

To which Tebow replies: a man needn't express his love for his wife only on their wedding day, but all the time. That's the way he feels about his Lord.

"That's the thing about my faith: It's not just something that happens when you're at church or happens when you're praying or reading the Scripture. It's a part of who you are, as a person, as a player, in your life and everything," Tebow said. "Hopefully, you're the same guy everywhere."

Tebow was born in the Philippines, to parents who were missionaries and taught him never to shy away from his faith. Like Reggie White and Kurt Warner before him, he feels compelled to share his story of salvation regardless of the sensitivity of the subject. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 If you keep in mind at all times that there is no such thing as a "sure thing" you won't go far wrong.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 If friends and family choose to oppose you don't push the issue. They'll come around eventually.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 If you try to have everything perfectly planned before you start a project, chances are you won't get started at all.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 You will do the exact opposite of what others expect of you today.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23 Anyone who tries to tell you that you are going about something in the wrong way will be treated with your usual Leo disdain.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 You want to be taken seriously by your peers, but that will only happen if you are clear in your own mind what it is you believe.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 There's a whole world out there waiting to be dazzled by your brilliance.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 You will be the centre of attention for quite a while to come.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Do you take on more work or do you enjoy more leisure time? Only you can decide.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Before you move ahead with a creative project it might be wise to get some input from those whose advice you trust.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Deep down you know there is something underhanded going on.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Don't put your hands over your ears and pretend you can't hear.
